

Campus Academic Program Applications Good - More Applications Welcome

Mature and high school students are invited to investigate the academic programs offered at the Ridgetown Campus of the University of Guelph. Current application numbers to the campus are good, and most programs remain open for applications. The Ridgetown Campus experience is focused on CHANGING LIVES and IMPROVING LIFE, offering students options that lead a variety of diversified careers.

Students interested in a diploma in agriculture, environmental management, or horticulture are encouraged to check out our programs on our website to learn about admission requirements and possible careers, or to see what current students have to say.

Students with an interest in environmental management can also consider the University of Guelph's Bachelor of Bio-Resource Management degree. Students have a "two campus advantage" in this program; they study for the first two years of the program at the Ridgetown campus, then complete the final two years at the Guelph campus. "This is a great opportunity to begin your post secondary studies at a smaller campus, and then compliment your experience with the many opportunities of the Guelph campus," says Campus Director, Dr. Art Schaafsma.

Mature students interested in the Second Career Program are encouraged to contact the campus registrar to learn more about this great educational option.

It's not too late to inquire, investigate, apply and start an exciting academic program at Ridgetown in September 2009! (Due to an oversubscription, applications to the Veterinary Technology Diploma program are closed for 2009.)

Meet Senior Agriculture Diploma student Tamara Visser . Tamara is involved in the Campus Student Ambassador program and the student Peer Helper program. As a Campus Ambassador she helps future students learn about the campus by participating in recruitment open house events.
